Be careful! The update file is a clean stock file without any modifications, based on the official firmware with MD5: 651c552601c657535efde0ea6a3dae34. Introduction of the update The update is for Nova Plus (MLA-L02) and it could be downloaded by means of an OTA (over-the-air) or through an USB cable. The version of the file that you are downloading is the latest, I recommend that you always download the latest version. You will find all the instructions on how to apply the firmware on the Huawei Support website. Comments about the new file: The new file was created a couple of days ago (on the 4th of March), but it was released just last week. It seems that they have found some kind of vulnerability in the system that let them create this update. This is the newest model to use the Nova ROM. On the other hand, I will talk about the update here and I will also talk about the official Android versions that they have released over the years. At this moment there are 4 different versions of the ROM for the Nova series that we have to talk about. The list that I am going to tell you is ordered from the most outdated to the most current. Nova ROM (version 1.0): This is the version that you are downloading now, this is the first ROM that was released for the Nova series. At this moment the Nova is still using version 1.0 of the ROM. Nova ROM (version 2.0): The second version of the ROM is the one that we have used until now. This is the version that was released at the beginning of February 2017. At this moment this is the oldest version that is still available and it is also the most outdated. You can still use it and it is also the one that I recommend you to use if you want to buy a new Huawei phone. Nova ROM (version 3.0): This is the most current version of the ROM. This is the version that was released on the 17th of March 2017. This was the first update to the Nova that we have seen in a couple of years. Nova ROM (version 4.0): The fourth version of the ROM was released on the 17th of April 2017. This is the one that we are talking about in this 82157476af
